Physics PhD Atlas 2027

10 of 82 programs from the full Atlas for international physics applicants (US, Canada and Europe), with every value copied from the program's own official page.

Six things international physics applicants miss this cycle

1. The Physics GRE is back at some top programs. In the full Atlas, it's required this cycle at Caltech, Cornell (theory applicants), Harvard University, Stanford, Calgary (international applicants), Berkeley, UChicago, University of Guelph (applicants with non-Canadian degrees), University of Virginia.
2. Some fees are free right now. Penn State waives its fee for everyone with code PHYS2027. Rice runs a worldwide fee-waiver window until Nov 1, 2026.
3. "My degree was in English" isn't always enough. Waterloo rejects medium-of-instruction letters. Alberta's exemption list includes the IITs and IISc but not the IISERs. UT Austin exempts applicants from India outright.
4. TOEFL changed scales on Jan 21, 2026. Programs now list two minimums (e.g., UBC: 90 old scale / 4.5 new scale).
5. Canada often admits supervisor-first. Waterloo requires a supervisor match, Ottawa wants a supervisor's name at application, and Calgary admits only if a supervisor will fund you.
6. Europe runs on different rules. EPFL charges no application fee; Cambridge charges £20 per year for up to 7 doctoral applications; Heidelberg's physics graduate-school portal closes Nov 1; at ETH Zurich and Leiden you apply to a professor or an advertised paid position instead of a central committee.
